Infant dies in bathtub accident

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

A seven-month old West Sacramento girl died in an apparently accidental drowning on Friday.

"It looks like the mother, who is 21, had put the child in one of those infant tubs (inside a bathtub) and was bathing the child," said Lt. David Farmer of the West Sacramento Police Department. "Someone came to the door and she went to answer it, leaving the infant in the tub. When she came back, the bathtub was full of water and the baby had drowned."

The tub's water was running, although the woman believed she had not left it running, he added.

Fire and ambulance personnel responded to the Simon Terrace apartment but could not revive the child, who was transported to the UC Davis Medical Center and pronounced dead.

"The preliminary report from the coroner's investigation and our own investigation both indicate that the death was consistent with accidental drowning," said Farmer.

Baseball bat assault leads to man's arrest

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

Jealousy may have been the motive in a baseball-bat attack at a Maple St. residence early Saturday morning.

Lt. David Farmer of the West Sacramento Police Department said that Steven Escobar, 26, was visiting a female friend at the location when a 36-year old man may have attacked him.

"Apparently the visit made the other male present jealous," said Farmer. "The suspect went to another area of the house, returned and struck him with a baseball bat."

Escobar underwent surgery on his head for the injury.

Suspect Willard Pease, a 36-year old West Sacramento, was arrested Monday morning for attempted murder.

There may not have been much of an argument before the assault, said Farmer.

"Preliminary reports indicate there was very little said."

Sac & West Sac leaders meet

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

Riverfront issues topped the discussion list at a congenial, first-ever joint meeting of the Sacramento and West Sacramento city councils on Aug. 17.

At the Sacramento meeting, Sacramento council member Bonnie Pannell asked that the two cities discuss a possible new Sacramento River crossing when they meet again in West Sacramento on Nov. 16.

"She was mentioning another crossing south of downtown," said Mayor Christopher Cabaldon of West Sacramento.

West Sacramento has long hoped for a river crossing near Sutterville Rd. and near Linden Rd., but has all but given up on the possibility due to historic opposition from the south Sacramento area.

Also on the agenda was a discussion of the I St. Bridge.

"We discussed painting and lighting the I St. Bridge," reported Cabaldon. "It's an issue (Sacramento) Mayor Serna and I have been working on with Union Pacific for some time. UP was there at the joint meeting and pledged their support."

The two cities also discussed the possibility of a "joint powers authority" (JPA) to spearhead riverfront land use projects of mutual concern.

"We're working on an integrated strategy for the river," said Cabaldon.

A JPA could help that process by uniting agencies on both sides of the river and helping win approval for new projects – such as marinas or recreation areas – from state regulators.

Agencies such as the State Lands Commission "look more favorably on that kind of effort rather than on fragmented efforts," he added.

Extend term of Christopher Cabaldon or future mayors?

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

As city council member Christopher Cabaldon's one-year term as West Sacramento's mayor approaches its end, the council on Wednesday held a freewheeling discussion on whether to extend future mayor's terms to two-years.

"I've always been a proponent of a two-year term, said Cabaldon. "The mayor could still be removed at any time. If three members of the council woke up on the wrong side of the bed, they should be able to remove him."

At present, the council selects a mayor and vice-mayor from its ranks yearly. Often – but not always – it has followed a genteel tradition of rotating the honor, and of promoting last year's vice mayor to be this year's mayor.

Council members Greg Potnick and Bill Kristoff – both past mayors themselves – said they were satisfied with the current, one-year term.

Councilman Cahill, however, asked for more specificity in the city's rules, including whether or not there is a rotation of the title and leadership role.

"I've heard varying stories about what the tradition is, and the best way to prevent that (confusion) is to have a set of rules."

A half-dozen citizens expressed their support for making the term two years.

Resident Lucille Scovill told the News-Ledger after the meeting that she was not immediately concerned with whether future mayors held two-year terms, but she wanted to see Cabaldon have another year.

"He's got too many projects going to go out of office now," she said. "It takes one year to get a project off the ground and another year to accomplish anything. He knows everybody and it would be foolish to change mayors at this time.

On another procedural topic, the council discussed the fact that it has never adopted a set of parliamentary rules.

"I'd just like to see us adopt some set of rules," said Cahill. "It's a good idea to have a handbook to go by."

The council asked its staff to look for a simplified set of "Robert's Rules of Order" that

Three reasons why there are no wolves in West Sac

By Daryl Fisher
Features Editor

The Irish wolfhound has been around since before the birth of Christ and was the most valued and sought after hunting dog of the early centuries, not only because of its tremendous size and hunting prowess, but also because it has always been an exceptional guardian and companion.

"They are an ancient breed," explained Sam Jennings, referring to his three Irish wolfhounds, which are named Strider, Fallon and Killia. "Strider is seven-years-old and he is Fallon and Killia's father. We also had their mother, whose name was Charlotte, but unfortunately she died a year ago from bone cancer, which is a disease common to wolfhounds."

Sam and his wife, Joan, moved to this area three years ago and their morning walks with their wolfhounds are a familiar sight to many West Sacramentans.

"It's very important that they get regular exercise," said Sam. "Wolfhounds were once warrior dogs and they were actually responsible for ridding the British Isles of wolves. They were known as the "Great Hound of Ireland" and they could also easily bring down large animals and at one time they stood four feet high at the shoulder and weighed as much as 400 pounds. Because it cost so much to feed them, they were owned mostly by the nobility and were kept in large stables that housed between 30 and 50 of them at the same time. With the invention of gunpowder, though, they were no longer in such great demand and they slowly began to decrease in both number and size."

Although wolfhounds are much smaller these days, Strider still weighs in at almost 200 pounds and Fallon and Killia are 175 pounds and 185 pounds, respectively.

"They eat about ten cups of dry dog food every day," said Sam, "and it takes me about three or four hours to give them all a bath. They have a rough coat and a lot of hair, so to properly bathe them, they have to be combed first, then bathed, then dried, and then combed again. So, with all the grooming and shedding and everything, taking good care of them often seems like a full-time job, but it's definitely worth it. They are very loyal and loving animals."

Sam used to raise Dobermans, but at a dog show about 20 years ago he was introduced by a breeder to Irish wolfhounds and he immediately fell in love with them.

SAM JENNINGS and his Irish wolfhounds

"Although most people wouldn't probably think so," explained Sam, "Irish wolfhounds don't really need a lot of space. They're very good indoor dogs and they like to just curl up in a ball on the floor and relax. They're pack dogs and they consider Joan and I part of their pack now. They howl for a few minutes to welcome us when we come home, but other than that, they don't really make a lot of noise. They're not much for barking."

Such large dogs would seem to be accidents waiting to happen, but Sam says that's just not the case.

"When they stretch out on their hind legs," said Sam, "they're almost seven-feet tall and they can reach the top of the refrigerator, but Irish wolfhounds are actually quite gentle dogs. They are also very intelligent and friendly and they make wonderful companions. From time to time, when I haven't felt particularly well, I've awaken to find Strider's nose right next to mine, just checking to make sure I was feeling better. And like most of the larger breeds, their life expectancy isn't very long -- only about six or seven years -- so we really try to enjoy them as much as we can."

Sam, who is a graduate of McGeorge Law School and a semi-retired Administrative Law Judge is really thankful for the time he has been able to spend with his Irish wolfhounds.

"Not only are they trustworthy, kind and patient," said Sam with sincerity, "but in my case, I can truly say they have also been a man's best friend."

Corrections –

An article in last week's News-Ledger gave an incorrect name for the committee founded to support a local school bond (Measure R) on the November 2 ballot. The committee is called "Support R Schools."

A photograph provided by the West Sacramento Redevelopment Agency several weeks ago was mistakenly attributed. The photo was taken by Melinda Posner.

The News-Ledger regrets the errors.

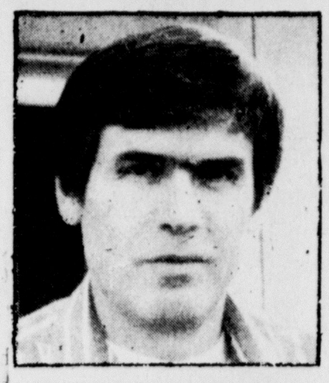
Sometimes it's good to have a bad reputation

Editor's note: Daryl is taking a couple of weeks off from column writing. The following is one of his favorites from the past.

My Back Pages



By Daryl Fisher

I was sharing a crowded table the other day at the Pot Belly Deli with some people I didn't really know when one of them (he apparently works in West Sac but lives on the other side of the river and has no idea that this column even exists, much less that his words might appear in it) suddenly pointed to the sweater I was wearing, which had a River City High School emblem on it, and insisted on knowing why I liked living in West Sacramento.

"Oh, lots of reasons," I told him. "To begin with, it's right smack dab in the center of everything. For instance, when I feel like going to the foothills, they're only 30-minutes away. And if I want to spend some time in the high mountains, Lake Tahoe is just another hour or so up the road. And when I get an urge to be in a big city, the best big city in the world, San Francisco, is only an hour and a half away. And when I want to spend a day at the ocean, I just...."

"No, no, no," he interrupted me, slowly shaking his balding head from side to side, "I didn't mean why do you like living in the Sacramento area -- I can understand that -- I like it, too. What I really want to know is why anyone in their right mind would want to live in West Sacramento?"

Well," I said as tactfully as I could, "I guess because it's home. I was born and raised in West Sacramento. My parents moved here from the Midwest right after my dad returned from World War Two and they bought a little house in a place called Westfield Village, which is over by Westfield Elementary School."

"That's by McDonalds, on West Capitol Avenue, isn't it?" he asked with a startled expression.

"That's right," I said.

"So, you grew up near West Capitol Avenue, right by all those rundown motels?" he asked, even more surprised.

"A few blocks away," I said, "on Michigan Boulevard, if you know where that is."

"Do you know what kind of reputation West Capitol Avenue has over by where I live?" he asked as he took another bite out of his low-fat turkey sandwich, which only had mustard on it because he had just heard that deli sandwiches can often be fatal if you throw all caution to the wind and put some mayonnaise on them.

"It wasn't always that way," I assured him. "When I was young, West Capitol Avenue was actually part of the main road which ran between San Francisco and Lake Tahoe. That's why there's so many motels. They used to be filled up with really friendly travelers and they were a great place to hang out when I was a kid, especially during the summer."

"Why?"

"Because most of them had a swimming pool and me and my friends would put on our bathing suits, hide our bikes in some nearby bushes, and sneak into them when no one was looking and pretend we were the kids of some of the people who had spent the night. The manager would usually get wise after awhile, but it sure was a great way to cool off when it really got hot."

"All I know," he said with emphasis, "is that every time I've driven down West Capitol Avenue, I've felt like I was taking my life into my own hands."

"Really?" I said with a smile.

"I'm serious," he assured me. "Judging from some of the low-lifes I've seen hanging around those motels, you must have a terrible crime problem over here."

As the man continued to harangue me with all the other horrible things he had heard about West Sacramento from people who don't live here, I debated with myself as to whether or not I should waste the last few minutes of my lunch hour trying to tell him the truth; that West Sacramento has thousands of wonderful people living in it; that most of them can still safely go for leisurely walks after the sun goes down; that our schools are a lot less violent and drug infested than the ones in Sacramento County; that it only takes us five minutes to commute into Sacramento while everybody else is stuck in traffic mouthing epithets at each other; and best of all, that we have somehow managed to preserve a small-town atmosphere here which once could be found throughout the United States.

Then, knowing that one of the reasons West Sacramento is still a great place to live is because most of the people who make their homes on the other side of the bridge are scared to death to step foot inside our city limits, I put on my most convincing expression, wiped a big glob of mayonnaise from the side of my mouth and said, "Well, I've got to get going. I don't like to leave my car in a West Sacramento parking lot too long -- vandalism, you know."

He nodded that he understood and I headed on back to work, comfortable in the knowledge that I had done my small part to keep the worst element of all out of West Sacramento.

Memorial bench for Tom Johnson

A group of friends and relatives gathered on West Sacramento's riverfront Friday to dedicate a plaque and a park bench in honor of Tom Allen Johnson, an active city resident killed in a car accident in August, 1997.

The plaque and bench were placed near the Money Store building.

Johnson was a city economic development advisory commission member and liaison to the local chamber of commerce.

Father Walsh of Our Lady of Grace Church gave a prayer and blessing at the dedication, and city council member Mark Montemayor also made remarks. Among the attendees were chamber of commerce director Don Hill and chamber president Jeff Henry.

A city bulletin published after Johnson's death noted his dedication to the city and friendly, outgoing personality.

The Major league baseball season is starting to heat up but the show belongs to Mark McGwire and Sammy Sosa. These two home run giants are at it again this season clubbing home runs.

McGwire belted two runs on Sunday to bring his season total to 50 and making him the first player to reach 50 home runs in four consecutive seasons. Mr. Sosa, who leads the league with 51 HR's, is on mission to break McGwire's record of 70 home runs in one season. Slammin Sammy also became the 4th player to post consecutive 50 home run seasons joining Big Mac, Ken Griffey Jr. and Babe Ruth. Sosa is actually nine games ahead of his 1998 home run pace when he hit 66 home runs. Sosa is on pace to hit 68 home runs this season. It's a shame that both McGwire and Sosa's teams are no longer serious postseason contenders!

Speaking of contenders, check out the Oakland A's (68-57), who are tied with Boston in the wild-card chase. The A's are getting great pitching but more importantly they are hitting the ball hard and are second in the American League with 178 home runs! The A's are making a serious run at the playoff but the fans are still staying away. The game on Sunday against their wild-card rival, Toronto, drew only 24,000 fans on beautiful Sunday afternoon! The A's will be on the road to Chicago before they head to the Big Apple to tangle with the Yankees in four game series starting on Thursday.

The Giants (64-59) are putting together a modest winning streak of four games but the first place Diamondbacks (73-52) on a winning streak of their own. The good news is rookie pitcher Joe Nathan turned in a good performance in Milwaukee as the Giants provided good run support with Bonds, Kent, and Burks hitting consecutive home runs. The Giants need the middle of the line up to play everyday or you can kiss this season good-bye!

The 49ers and Raiders are gearing up for the pres-season battle of the Bay on Monday, August 30 in Oakland. The 49ers will be working on their number two quarterback position as the battle between Jeff Garcia, Jim Druckenmiller and Steve Stenstrom heats up. Garcia has the edge going into the third pre-season game completing 22 out of 34 passes and two touchdowns. Both Stenstrom (3-5, 1 TD) and Druckenmiller (2-7 for 37 yds.) are struggling. My guess is that who ever the Niners cut will probably be picked up by the Raiders, who have a problem at the number two quarterback spot. The Raiders are trying to see who will be the number two halfback in their rotation. Will it be Rashaan Salaam or Tyrone Wheatley? Another problem we face as football fans is the game is not sold out and it looks like another blackout for Sacramento fans. The Raiders have not sold out a game since Sept. 8, 1997 against Kansas City. The Raiders are reporting that as many as 4,000 tickets remain for the 5 p.m. contest. The prices are $51, $61, $71, and $81. Do you think this could be the reason they can't sell out their games? A family of four would only have to pay ($81 per ticket) $324 plus parking to watch their beloved Raiders.

Oh well, there goes the car payment!

The 1999 John Hancock U.S. Gymnastics Championships start on Wednesday, August 25 with a double session starting at 1:00 p.m. and 7 p.m. and run through Saturday, August 28 at the Arco Arena. On Thursday at 1 p.m. are the Jr. Women 's All-Around Preliminaries & Event Finals and at 7 p.m. the Sr. Women's All-Around Finals. The Men's All-round Finals are on Friday at 7 p.m. The Jr. Women's All-Around Finals are Saturday at 1 p.m. and event closes at 6 p.m. with Sr. Women's Event Finals. Tickets are still available by calling (916) 264-7718 or you can pick up tickets at the Arco Box Office.

Boxing at the Radisson returns on Wednesday, September 1 with the "New Kids on the Block", features new hometown boy Juan Lazcano (17-2, 12 KO's) against Cristino Mota (16-9, 11 KO's). The Don Chargin promotion will also have undefeated Eric Regan, (4-0) all by knockout in the first round and Dominic Robles, Greg Kirkpatrick, and Rene Silva. The first bout starts at 7:30 p.m. and you can pick up tickets at Pro-Venture Travel (1420 Merkley, suite 6 – 372-9294) in West Sacramento.

OPINION

News-Ledger Editorial:

Measure R: To be considered on its own merits

There is plenty of good reason to question the effectiveness of the leadership of the Washington Unified School District. But to use this as an excuse to withhold support for Measure R, a $17 million school bond on the ballot for Nov. 2, is wrong.

The bond measure deserves an evaluation based on other criteria; it should not receive your "yes" or "no" vote based solely on what you think of the school board. Instead, please consider:

■ How much good the bond measure will do for the schools. Take a look at the projects that the bond measure hopes to fund. Decide how important these improvements are to local schools. Ask yourself if local students and their education will receive substantial benefit if Measure R passes.

■ Whether the town can afford it. The owner of a "median" home, with an assessed value of $70,000 or so, will pay $30 per year for 25 years. The owners of more or less expensive homes will pay proportionately more or less. Is this reasonable for the benefits of Measure R?

■ How well the money and construction will be managed. Yes, this includes a value judgment on the management skills of the school board and top administrators. But it also includes consideration of how well the bond was written and designed, and allowance for the fact that a citizen's oversight committee has been authorized to ride herd on the bond money and its use.

■ The effect on the community if the bond is not passed. Two major bonds, both designed to build a new high school, have failed this decade. The fate of the current (smaller) proposal, which only aims to improve existing schools, may tell us something about the near-term future of West Sacramento. If Measure R fails, when will the community have another chance? How would the bond's failure affect the path of new housing construction in West Sacramento? When will conditions be more "ideal" to improve local school facilities?

An intelligent decision on Measure R involves more than a popularity contest for the handful of people who run the local school district.

Letters to the Editor

Why a two-thirds majority?

I began wondering in depth about the two-thirds majority vote rule for school bonds.

Just about all else (including Prop. 13 of over 20 years ago) requires only simple majority approval – right? Is there not some kind of law that orders us to provide education for our youngsters?

How is it that we can legally allow new and expanded development that results in more students than our local schools can handle? Should a factor in the sale of a home be "how many students will the sale add to the local school districts?" Just imagine local laws preventing sales or rentals of housing to families with more school-age kids! Such laws probably would state, "Your youngsters too young for school will have to be offset by those graduating or otherwise leaving school for the labor market, etc."

Just as some land buyers prefer non-residential development (to avoid being bothered with expense and trouble of schools), it is surprising we do not see (more) non-family gated communities. The goal of course would be to avoid paying school taxes. If such a law does not yet exist, maybe that's part of the future schools' financial answer. And let's not forget that better education usually means better jobs for more, which would also seem to result in less crime, and crime costs more in taxes and safety.

Meanwhile, maybe someone with legal expertise should challenge the two-thirds school bond passage rule. With our present County Supervisor Mike McGowan and his predecessor, Clark Cameron, leading the campaign to approve Measure R for $17 million for our local Washington Unified School District on Nov. 2, maybe those legal minds could answer my question on the legality of the two-thirds rule. Good luck on Measure R.

P.S.: Awhile back, I stated I did not understand how used tires could be recycled to improve levees. Was told that such recycled rubber would form a vertical wall down center of levee (road). But would we not have "two half levees," and how would that be stronger overall? Am still confused on that one.

might be appropriate for the council's use at meetings.

"There should be some user-friendly interpretation of it," opined councilman Kristoff.

The council also learned that a heretofore obscure section of the municipal code allowed any council member to suggest a future agenda item by submitting it to the city clerk 96 hours in advance of a meeting.

The council can then have a chance to discuss whether to formally explore the item – and to devote staff time and council study time to it.

The mayor's term and parliamentary items will all return at a future meeting for formal action.

CASE NUMBER PB 99-165

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of FREDERICK L. RASTEDE, aka FREDERICK LEONARD RASTEDE, aka FREDERICK RASTEDE:

A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by SALLY JENKINS in the Superior Court of California, County of Yolo.

THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that SALLY JENKINS be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on 8/31/99 at 8:30 a.m. in Dept. 2 located at 725 Court Street, Woodland, CA 95695.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the deceased, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in Probate Code section 9100. The time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a formal Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

A New Kind Of Nursing Home

(NAPS)—Fewer of today's nursing homes look like a typical health care institution. In fact, architects now strive to make today's homes more like home since some residents may need to live there for a long time.

Increasingly, architects say that today's nursing homes provide far more privacy to residents, mainly through creative room design. Many resident rooms and hallways are now carpeted, because certain kinds of carpets can be cleaned every day.

Also, by using natural fiber and artificial light in combination, many spaces throughout the homes are friendly and warm.

Another major design change is in nurse's stations. Formerly, most architects put them at the center. Now, the typical nurse station is less centralized and more like a reception area where residents and staff can easily interact.

"These kinds of changes have made nursing homes friendlier and more home like," said Len Fishman, president and chief executive officer of the American Association of Homes and Services for the Aging.

For more information on how to choose a good nursing home, contact the American Association of Homes and Services for the Aging, 901 E Street NW, Washington, D.C. 20004, call 800-675-9253 or visit the web site at www.aahsa.org.
